ABOUT THIS COURSE

What is React Foundations?

A focused four-week sprint through React — the library that powers most modern web apps. You'll build three real projects and understand the mental model deeply.

Prasant has shipped production React applications and worked with frontend teams ranging from solo developers to large engineering orgs. React Foundations is structured around the decisions he makes daily — component design, state management, and the reasoning behind each.

He believes modern frontend development is genuinely hard, and that most courses underestimate how much clarity comes from understanding the "why" behind framework choices. This course prioritises that clarity over breadth.
